Dear Oliveri,

Severe weather is on everyone's mind following the tornadoes and severe weather that devastated Oklahoma City and many other parts of the country. Prepare your home and family for a natural disaster with these helpful tips and resources.

THE DOCKET /

Prepare for Severe Weather Before Disaster Strikes

Even with advanced weather science to better predict storm conditions, Mother Nature still holds all the cards. The massive tornado that obliterated Moore, Okla., on May 20 struck just 16 minutes after the first siren was sounded. And while violent storms grab all the headlines, more common severe weather like heat waves, heavy rain and lightning cause considerable casualties. While there are no guarantees, you should know how to prepare for the worst and increase your chances of survival during any type of severe weather.
